Poor facilities for kids and families

Re no of bedrooms, this question is not answerable as you don't give the alternatives ie as opposed to 1 bed houses or 4 bed houses or something different. I prefer 3/4 bedroom houses so could not answer the question either way

Holton le clay has nothing for children, it's at the council border and therefore feels forgotten. The facilities in the village are poor.

More residents to the village would only add more strain to such services as the school and doctors which are both already VERY full .Rather than just more housing being built I would like to see a lovely park being built (like they have in the more deprived areas of the county) and investments made in activities for children at the new village hall (especially during the holidays). HLC is a lovely VILLAGE let's not make it a town!!

Schools need a massive overhaul.

I've lived here since I was small and always loved the close community feeling.

Expanding could damage that and make Holton le clay feel less homely.

I do feel that the area does not offer enough for their young people. The current committee is made up of mainly older people that are out of touch with the younger generation and have refused to listen to the views of the younger generation. I have no problem with housing developments within the village as I feel we have sufficient schooling, preschool places to cope with it. I would however like to see more activities for the younger generation in the village hall which will is currently made difficult to organise due to ridiculously high hall hire fees. If we are to increase the amount of young people in the village we need to encourage organisations into the village to provide activities for them to do.

I am not opposed to development in our village but I do feel that as usual, profit making development is more important than those advancements that would benefit our community in the future. Using former agricultural land to build a massive, by village terms, housing estate to line the pockets of already wealthy land owners is wrong, but, if the money made from this housing project was invested in the local community to improve the future of our village, then I would have no problem with the development.

I have no opinion on question no 2, but have been forced to put an answer in, to allow me to submit this survey. This must not be the way to get an unbiased and fair survey.

I believe that Holton Le Clay would benefit from developments with a range of houses up to and including 4-5 bedroom prestigious houses. I also think some properties with large gardens would be beneficial. There are very few premium homes in the village and I personally know of people who have moved out of HLC because it did not offer the premium properties they were looking for. Green spaces, village greens and parks are also a priority.

More facilities needed for young families. Such as an upgraded park, like the one in Waltham, and where you can take your dog with you.

We've always needed somewhere for the kids to go, the playing field behind the school would be a great place.
